CONFERENCE DESCRIPTION

Extraordinary changes have taken place in women's health care. Driven by scientific evidence, healthcare professionals understand that treating the body alone is not enough, and that the human mind and resources outside the realm of allopathic medicine can also play a critical role in care and the healing process. Our 13th Annual Conference on Integrative Medicine in Women's Health is designed to take an in-depth look at a variety of complementary alternative treatment modalities, and provide mainstream medical and nursing professionals with evidence-based data for some of the alternative health care practices used by and for the female patient. The goal of this conference is to provide a comprehensive view on current issues in integrative medicine in women's health. Emphasis will be placed on practical application of presentations. In addition to didactic lectures, ample time has been allotted for participant feedback and interaction.

Topics for this year's conference have been selected based on extensive target audience needs assessment data resulting from professional practice gaps. These gaps were identified by a variety of sources including feedback and evaluations from past participants, clinical expert input, Symposia Medicus' online survey, and other medical and nursing data.

Conference format will include didactic lectures, small group interactive workshops, and question and answer periods.

An outstanding faculty has been assembled for this conference. Faculty members are committed to providing participants with current and practical information. Each member was selected based on individual area of expertise and ability to communicate first-hand information to participants.

Morning sessions and one afternoon session leave ample time for relaxing, enjoying discussions with colleagues from across the country, and exploring beautiful Sedona.
